Happy Thanksgiving to all!

Taos Ski Valley opens its ski season Thanksgiving Day! For all you ski and snowboard enthusiasts this is a great day. Taos Ski Valley has been making snow for weeks thanks to Mother Nature's early snowfall. Remember, Taos Ski Valley now allows snowboarding so families will no longer have to divide their time between Taos and Angel Fire especially since Angel Fire Ski Mountain doesn't open until December 12. TSV will open with lift one running to White Feather and Powderhorn. There is presently a 20" base of natural snow and the mountain has been making "massive amounts "of manmade snow.

In the meantime, Sipapu Ski Resort has claimed its seventh consecutive year as the first ski area open in New Mexico. The ski mountain opened last weekend nearly top to bottom. Sipapu offers new features to their terrain parks as well as improvements to glades and runs.

Red River Ski Area has opened November 25 with their new triple chair to midway. The new lift will provide faster times to the summit and will also reduce lift lines providing a better overall experience.

So skiers....there is no better time to enjoy the ski mountains of northern New Mexico. While you are enjoying the natural pleasures of our gorgeous mountains, why not contemplate an investment in Taos Real Estate so that you can enjoy these pleasures year after year?
